He trotted around the track several times, not even cantering. The crowd had plenty of opportunity to observe him. Clifford is a horse who on first sight strikes one as being very ordinary looking. On close observation, however, one is impressed with the fact that he is not a small horse by any means, but is put together so compactly that the idea of smallness is conveyed.

He has a tremendous chest and splendid pair of shoulders. He is all pears to be in perfect condition, and that the journey has not harmed him is proven by the fact that his supper consisted of sixteen quarts of oats last

Don Alonzo, Ajax and Loantaka were the only candidates to work this morning. The Don was, as usual, paired off with Banquet and sent the full distance. Both horses pulled up fresh and strong in 2.11. Ajax was sent a mile and a half, and the manner in which he worked impressed the spectators far more than his last trial. He covered the distance in 2.42, and was as fresh as a dalsy at the end. He could apparently have gone on a mile and a half further. The fractional time was as follows: 0.14, 0.25, 0.42 1-4, 0.54 1-2, 1.08 1-4, 1.21 1-2, 1.38 2-4, 1.49, 2.02 1-4, 2.10 2 1

Dr Bolton thinks Yale's crew much superior to Harvard, and he reports that the latter are doing wretched. Yale's new paper shell has been rigged and put in the water. It weighs fortyfive pounds more than Harvard's cedar boat, but is considered more durable.

Dr. Bolton returns to New York tonight, and it is expected that Capt. Ives will coach the crew until "Bob" Cook puts n an appearance.
